Member Benefits Guide

I AM
AIA

Your passion is our purpose.

No matter where you live, where you practice, or where you are in your career, your AIA membership connects you to top-quality education, critical business and career resources, and a community deeply engaged in promoting the value of architecture.

You'll find like minds and provocative new perspectives among our 85,000+ members and nearly 300 chapters. Our members come from diverse backgrounds and follow many paths: Architecture, design, academia, technology, science, art, and media. They're architects, new graduates, designers, design enthusiasts, professors, solo practitioners, employees of large and boutique firms, and those on traditional, alternate, and hybrid career paths.

What they share: A passion for design, a conviction that it matters, and a commitment to improving lives through the built environment.

The AIA is committed to developing and sharing what you need for your chosen path—offering core member services such as education, career and business resources, and the combined power to advance critical legislative issues at all levels of government.

Use this guide to put the benefits of membership to work for you.

AIA chapters

When you become an AIA member, you're immediately connected to benefits at the local, state, and national levels. That's a global community of nearly 300 chapters, giving you access to critical resources across a diverse, influential network.

- Local and state chapters: Most states have both local and state AIA chapters that work together to deliver a core set of benefits to members in that area. In addition to these core benefits, chapters offer additional benefits customized to support member needs in their unique local area. Your benefits through your local and state chapters include networking and education opportunities, legislative advocacy, awards programs, community awareness campaigns, and local events. Many local chapters also offer Architect Registration Exam® prep classes. Check with your chapter for more details.
- International chapters: The Continental Europe, United Kingdom, Hong Kong, Japan, Shanghai, and Middle East chapters serve AIA members outside of the U.S. and connect them to dynamic programs and events around the globe. These chapters also act as liaisons to other international architecture organizations.
- AIA National: AIA National advances members' common causes, helping to set standards, raise public awareness, and advocate nationally for architects.

AIA membership designations

Your AIA designation tells your professional story in just a few letters. It immediately shows others what you've achieved, how you connect to the profession, and what you're working toward. Visit the AIA website for full descriptions.

- AIA indicates that you are a U.S.-licensed architect.
- Assoc. AIA indicates that you are an architecture school graduate who is working in the field and who also may be working toward licensure. Faculty members in a university-based architecture program also use the Assoc. AIA designation.
- Intl. Assoc. AIA indicates that you are an international member with a license or equivalent from a licensing authority outside the U.S.
- Allied members are professional colleagues and design enthusiasts who do not hold a professional degree in architecture.
- FAIA indicates that you are a member who has made significant contributions to the field, met standards of excellence, and been accepted into the AIA College of Fellows.
- Emeritus applies to members in good standing with 15 years of successive membership and who meet age and retirement criteria.

Continuing education

Shape your future with top-quality education from leaders in the field. You can earn AIA learning units (LUs) plus HSW, GBCI, and RIBA credits. You can also earn supplemental experience hours for NCARB's Intern Development Program.

AIAU

Take five-star courses online, on your schedule, from anywhere in the world through AIAU, our online education portal. Courses are curated, led by top instructors, and rated highly by our community of users.

Convention

AIA Convention is one of the largest and most exciting annual gatherings of architects and design professionals in the U.S. Choose from hundreds of high-quality education opportunities at this annual immersion into the latest trends and topics in architecture and design.

Chapter conferences

Tap into continuing education opportunities and networking events through your state and/or local chapters.

Transcript service

Take a course through AIAU, convention, or an AIA-approved CES provider, and we'll automatically update your AIA member transcript with your continuing education credit, for free. The AIA transcript is accepted by nearly all state licensing boards. NCARB accepts AIA transcripts for IDP (Intern Development Program) supplemental experience hours.

Local chapter events

Gain new knowledge, earn continuing education credit, obtain IDP hours, and put globally important topics and trends into a regional context through chapter events.

Advocacy

The AIA is your voice in policy and legislation at all levels of government. Our efforts, combined with the power of 85,000+ member advocates, help architects and design professionals protect their livelihood and make a difference.

Federal relations

AIA helps architects and designers make a difference in Congress and with the White House on vital topics that impact your practice and your world, including tax and business issues, procurement, sustainability, historic preservation, and more.

State and local relations

AIA chapters advocate on the legislative issues that impact the business and practice of architecture including licensing, project delivery, and qualifications-based selection.

Codes advocacy

Members can participate in the development of building, energy, and environmental codes and standards to ensure that the voice of the architect is included in these important regulatory tools.

AIA Advocacy Network

Be among the first to find out about—and act on—legislation that impacts your professional future, as well as special advocacy training and programs that help you speak up for architects.

ArchiPAC

AIA's federal political action committee gives members a voice in the political process to advance our field.
